

CITY OF TROY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Riverfront is Key to Ongoing Revitalization Plans

Seven miles of waterfront is an undeniable asset for any locality and the City of Troy is working to make the most of it with the Hudson Riverwalk. One of Troy's most popular recreational attractions, the Riverwalk is being extended north and south to encompass more of the city's neighborhoods and provide a walkable connection for residents, businesses and visitors.

"The Riverwalk is the key to opening up the city to the waterfront and provides seven miles of opportunities to connect Troy to this natural treasure," said Steven Strichman, Commissioner of Planning & Economic Development. "We're working towards creating a continuous Riverwalk, from the Menands Bridge in South Troy, through downtown, and north through Lansingburgh. Our goal is to build on the strengths of downtown's success by connecting it to the rest of Troy, so that other areas of the city can benefit."

"We worked tirelessly over the last six years to revitalize our city's waterfront, including the Ingalls Avenue Boat Launch, the Downtown Seawall and the Hudson Riverwalk," said Mayor Patrick Madden. "Extension of the Riverwalk and planned construction of the 1st Avenue Trail in Lansingburgh is the next phase in Troy's waterfront revitalization efforts, providing new amenities to attract visitors and residents to explore what Troy has to offer."

The city has designed a Riverwalk extension, north of the Green Island Bridge, that will relocate the trail to run along the bank of the Hudson, instead of its current path through parking lots at the Courtyard by Marriott and under the Hoosick Street Bridge. In addition, a $400,000 Hudson River Valley Greenway grant will enable Troy to create its first official connection to the Empire State Greenway Trail. The city plans to construct a trailhead in the Green Island Parking Lot, on the Troy side of the Green Island Bridge, and install a protected bicycle and pedestrian trail on the northern side of the bridge to directly connect the Riverwalk to the state trail.

In Lansingburgh, the city is designing an On Road Shared Use Path for bicyclists and pedestrians along the entire length of First Avenue, from 111th Street at Powers Park to 123rd Street. The path will be used as an extension of the Riverwalk, where people can enjoy the water views on a relatively low vehicular-use street. Troy is also planning to create riverfront access by making use of Lansingburgh's east-west streets that dead end at the water's edge. These "water lobbies" represent potential for recreational spaces that will increase public use of the waterfront and add to the Riverwalk's impact.

Opportunity to extend the Riverwalk south will be created by the Congress Street Bridge project. The plan is to reconfigure the lanes entering and exiting the bridge and eliminate the need for Front Street, opening up three city blocks of potential for the riverfront trail, as well as redevelopment possibilities in South Troy. Parts of the bridge project are expected to be implemented in 2022. VISIT troyny.gov

PROPOSAL READY TO BE PRESENTED

One Monument Square to Complete Riverfront

Representing the capstone of Troy's downtown waterfront redevelopment, the proposal for One Monument Square and "Riverfront Park 2.0" will seek planning commission approval early in 2022. The project received a funding boost in November when New York State Governor Kathy Hochul declared Troy a Downtown Revitalization Initiative (DRI) award winner and recipient of $10 million in funding for revitalization efforts.

Hoboken Brownstone Co. and the city are proposing a $60 million plan for the 1.1 acre site, including a six-story, mixed-use building on River Street with a first-floor restaurant, retail space and an indoor food market to assist in developing home-grown businesses. The building features 90 apartments on the upper floors and two levels of below-ground parking. A 20,000-square-foot outdoor plaza, located at the southern end of Riverfront Park, is designed to encourage the flow of pedestrians coming from River Street and includes greenery, seating and recreational spaces. Troy's goal is to leverage the project, with its well-designed public spaces and urban amenities, to connect the riverfront to nearby neighborhoods and to attract economic investors and innovation centers.

"Members of the community asked for parking, public spaces and a plaza connection to the riverfront. This plan delivers all of it," said Troy Mayor Patrick Madden. "This project completes the redevelopment of Riverfront Park and transforms another long-vacant waterfront property in our downtown. Step by step, we're reinventing our city, united in the belief that we will create a future that measures favorably with the greatness of our past." VISIT troyny.gov

CITY OF TROY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Riverfront is Key to Ongoing Revitalization Plans

Seven miles of waterfront is an undeniable asset for any locality and the City of Troy is working to make the most of it with the Hudson Riverwalk. One of Troy's most popular recreational attractions, the Riverwalk is being extended north and south to encompass more of the city's neighborhoods and provide a walkable connection for residents, businesses and visitors.

"The Riverwalk is the key to opening up the city to the waterfront and provides seven miles of opportunities to connect Troy to this natural treasure," said Steven Strichman, Commissioner of Planning & Economic Development. "We worked tirelessly over the last six years to revitalize our city's waterfront, including the Ingalls Avenue Boat Launch, the Downtown Seawall and the Hudson Riverwalk," said Mayor Patrick Madden. "Extension of the Riverwalk and planned construction of the 1st Avenue Trail in Lansingburgh is the next phase in Troy's waterfront revitalization efforts, providing new amenities to attract visitors and residents to explore what Troy has to offer."

The city has designed a Riverwalk extension, north of the Green Island Bridge, that will relocate the trail to run along the bank of the Hudson, instead of its current path through parking lots at the Courtyard by Marriott and under the Hoosick Street Bridge. INVESTOR PROFILE

New “Heights” for Rifenburg Construction

A team of 25 Rifenburg Construction, Inc. employees worked with industry subcontractors to finish a major project in Lake Placid, reconstructing the Olympic Jumping Complex ahead of the 2023 Winter World University Games. The project is part of a major revitalization of iconic Lake Placid sites by the Olympic Regional Development Authority (ORDA) to attract more visitors and world-class athletes to the Adirondack village.

The Olympic Jumping Complex Outrun Reconstruction required installation of concrete surfaces to create 100-meter and 128-meter jumps. The $8.5 million project covers six acres and included construction of an elevated steel structure, retaining walls, deflection boards and stairs. Underground infrastructure was upgraded and a steel observation platform was built. The project was challenging due to the extreme slope and the sports' precision construction standards. Rifenburg's best operators graded the near-vertical slopes in a Cat dozer tethered to a concrete anchor and winched up the mountain.

Also in 2021, Rifenburg (as part of a joint venture) finalized the Cashless Tolling project for the NYS Thruway Authority, having removed toll booths and barriers from 52 thruway interchanges across New York State and installed overhead gantries and equipment that modernized the 475-mile transportation system.

Other contracts currently underway include a Border Entry project in Alexandria Bay, New York; airport runway projects in Albany, Saratoga and Plattsburgh; and multiple residential subdivision site work projects in North Carolina.

Rifenburg Construction is a Visionary Investor in We Advance, supporting the Chamber's workforce development initiative since its creation. “The future of our business relies on qualified employees,” said Rifenburg CFO John Ahearn. “We can invest in equipment and technology but our success depends on trained, dedicated workers, who are our greatest asset. It’s paramount to build a strong workforce by encouraging the next generation to choose careers in the trades.” VISIT rifenburg.com

ENVISIONING A HEALTHY URBAN COMMUNITY

City of Rensselaer Welcoming New Businesses

A combination of new businesses, increased public access to the waterfront, community open spaces and upgraded infrastructure are elements designed to revitalize the City of Rensselaer and establish the municipality as an attractive urban center ready to welcome businesses and visitors. The 3.3-square-mile city, situated along the Hudson River across from the state capital, is attracting businesses and investors looking for cost-efficient locations, redevelopment opportunities and a welcoming environment. The city's planning department is also pursuing grants and completing several significant studies to help support economic development and long-term growth.

Creative Cuisine

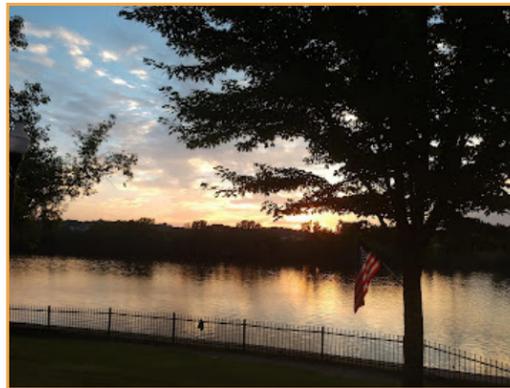

“We’re looking to foster the staples of a healthy urban setting and one of those staples is a creative economy,” said Rensselaer’s Director of Planning Ketura Vics. “From well-established artisans to newer businesses like The Cakerino Bake Shop, Rensselaer’s location is attracting innovative entrepreneurs. A creative economy can breath life into our downtown area and bring in new residents, visitors and additional businesses.”

Two restaurants will be opening downtown. One specializes in Korean food and will open on Broadway. The owner operates a successful location on Madison Avenue in Albany and was looking to expand the reach of the business. The other restaurant will serve Burmese cuisine from the business cluster at Broadway and Partition Street. The owner is converting the two-family structure into mixed-use development with apartments above and the restaurant on the ground floor. “International cuisine is a hallmark of vital urban areas and people interested in new food experiences are looking to downtowns as destinations,” said Vics. “These new restaurants will help bring in visitors who might not otherwise come to Rensselaer. It’s a first-step that can lead to more good news.”

The Cakerino Bake Shop on Washington Avenue specializes in vegan and vegan/gluten free custom cakes and desserts.

Connecting to the Waterfront

Rensselaer is completing a study to improve public access to the riverfront in the northern end of the city, adjacent to the Hilton Park and Boat Ramp (photo, left). With input from the Capital District Transportation Committee, and assistance from an engineering firm, the Northern Waterfront Linkage Study seeks to optimize connections from Washington Avenue, Broadway and Forbes Avenue to the waterfront. The study includes elimination of the “Forbes Avenue bottleneck,” a traffic-flow problem that limits vehicular access to the site. The goal is to provide safe and reliable connections between neighborhoods and the waterfront, while making the area more conducive to quality redevelopment. The study will be finished by early 2023.

Redevelopment Readiness

Also at the northern end of the city, Rensselaer is conducting a Combined Sewer Outflow Elimination Study. Its purpose is to improve the capacity of the city's water infrastructure on the northern waterfront by eliminating the existing combined sewer outflow. This improvement would be more efficient and cost-saving and would also better serve any future development or redevelopment of the general area, including proposals for the Hilton Center, a site that has received redevelopment interest in recent years. Funded through a NYS Environmental Facilities Corporation Engineering Planning Grant, the study's completion date is early 2023.

A site of potential redevelopment is the vacant Hilton Center, a former historic mill.

Wide Open Spaces

From the Mill Creek waterfall (photo, left) to downtown areas, Rensselaer is looking to create sustainable, green spaces to increase the quality of life for residents and to make the city more attractive to visitors. The City-Wide Open Space Plan is an ongoing study funded through the NYS DEC Hudson River Estuary Program. The study's purpose is to connect and improve the climate resiliency impact of the city's existing open spaces (the riverfront, the Hollow trail, pocket parks and more) and to identify areas of the city, such as downtown, which are “overly grey” in order to determine feasible and impactful ways to “green” them. “Making areas more green sets the tone for local priorities and says that we care about the environment around us,” said Vics.

Brownfield Clean-Up

A NYS Brownfield Opportunity Area (BOA) grant is enabling the city to pursue designation for project funding through the Regional Economic Development Councils. The BOA program is designed to help clean up identified brownfield sites and explore potential reuse options but it also seeks to develop/redevelop properties located near brownfields in order to “empower communities to revitalize neighborhoods affected by brownfields.” Rensselaer’s proposed BOA encompasses downtown, the train station, and DeLaet’s Landing. Phase 1 of the BOA is nearing completion and the city will resubmit for designation in time to apply for CFA funding in 2022.

The Troy Savings Bank Music Hall is a jewel of a performance venue, world renowned for its acoustics and a destination for artists and entertainers who appreciate its intimate atmosphere and audiences. After a successful holiday season — including chorus-in-residence Albany Pro Musica’s Christmas concert — the Music Hall is looking forward to an exciting 2022.

“There’s no substitute for live performance and the Music Hall is a special place where artists and audiences meet to share the experience,” said Executive Director Jon Elbaum. “In addition to classical music and jazz, this year we’re broadening the range of our performances to include world music, popular entertainment and more comedy shows than before.”

Comedian Howie Mandel

The busy 2022 schedule features comedy shows with Paula Poundstone, Howie Mandel, Patton Oswalt and Marc Maron, as well as a stage version of “The Moth Radio Hour” (heard on National Public Radio), highlighting the art of storytelling with inspiring stories from around the world. Folk singer-songwriter Gordon Lightfoot and American adult contemporary and pop/rock singer Richard Marx will also headline upcoming shows. Beyond public performances, the Music Hall will welcome a variety of musicians for recording sessions. These artists prefer the Music Hall’s acoustics to a recording studio.

The Music Hall is committed to supporting arts education for students throughout the region and has expanded its programs to assist schools, especially since COVID. The non-profit organization works with a roster of teaching artists to bring hundreds of arts enrichment and interactive programs to students.

“There have been positive outcomes from the pandemic and arts education is one of them,” said Elbaum. “Also, there is a certain camaraderie that has built up among the area’s performing arts organizations and we are sharing information and having conversations. We are competitors but we all have the same goal: to create a vibrant cultural region where the arts are valued and celebrated.”
